DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1, 3, 4, 6, 7, and 9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Jacobson et al(3,426,684 or 3,403,625).

Both patents to Jacobson disclose an additive for reducing erosion in a gun barrel by applying the additive to the cartridge, around the propellant charge, to the textile containing the propellant or in the wall of a consumable cartridge casing. The additives disclosed are molybdenum and tungsten either in elemental form or in the form of an oxide. The additive can comprise about 3 % of the propellant charge.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 2, 5, and 8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Jacobson et al(3,426,684 or 3,403,625) in view of Watson-Adams(4,378,256) and Mosser et al(4,724,172).

Both patents to Jacobson disclose an additive for reducing erosion in a gun barrel by applying the additive to the cartridge, around the propellant charge, to the textile containing the propellant or in the wall of a consumable cartridge casing. The additives disclosed are molybdenum and tungsten either in elemental form or in the form of an oxide. The additive can comprise about 3 % of the propellant charge. However, Jacobson et al does not disclose the use of lanthanide metal oxides.

Watson-Adams teaches a coating that is applied to the surface of projectiles. This coating causes an aluminum surface layer to build up inside the barrel and reduces the erosion of the metal inside the gun barrel.

Mosser et al teaches an improvement over the invention of Watson-Adams by using ceramic coatings as a better way to prevent metal erosion. These materials include cerium dioxide.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use the teaching of an improved coating to protect metal erosion provided by Mosser with the invention of Watson-Adams since Mosser suggests that these additives are an improvement to those taught by Watson-Adams. It would also be obvious to use the teachings of Mosser and Watson-Adams with a combustible cartridge disclosed by Jacobson to provide erosion resistance to guns that use combustible cartridges.
